

said intra-station device comprises identifying means for identifying whether received data is subscriber data or the control information; and said intra-station device transmits the data after adding routing information, when said identifying means has received the subscribed data, to received subscriber data to be routed to a destination, and after adding the routing information, when said identifying means has received the control information, to received control information to be routed to said interface unit at said receiving equipment.

---

50.(thrice amended) A switch station according to claim 95, wherein said control processor checks for a fault in said loopback device connected to the control processor according to the program for said loopback test.

---